Claudia Pesce 671187 views When learning is present simple, the ultimate goal is to make sure that your students understand that it is used to describe routines, habits, daily activities, and common truths. The contrast between the Real Simple and the Real Progressive is also important. This series of steps will help you teach the present simple and covers function, conjugation and shape. How to continue 1 Introduce action Take a newspaper and pretend to read it. Ask your students what you're doing. They'll say, You're reading the paper. T: What newspaper do I read? S: You read the New York Times. 2 Introduce the present simply - First face singular Tell your students: I read The New York Times every day. Make a list of things you do every day as a routine: I have breakfast at 7. I'm going to work at 9. I'm having lunch at 12. I'm going home at 5. I watch TV before dinner. Make sure your students understand that you are doing this on a daily or weekly basis; these are commonplace actions. Walk around the classroom and students tell you what they do every day or what some of their habits are. They should give more examples in the singular first person. 3 Present the present simply - Second Man Singular Say: I read the New York Times. Sarah, you read USA Today. Walk around the classroom, giving examples like: I'm going to work at 9. You go to school. The face of each of your students and the state of common truth: T: John, you live in queens. John (teacher): You also live in queens. T: Sally, you have a dog. Sally (teacher): You have a cat. Divide your students into pairs and force them to give each other statements in the second person singular. 4 Introduce the present simply - Third person singular Say: I read the New York Times. Sarah reads USA Today. Make sure students notice that you have added s for a third person singular. Give more examples to other students, and enter irregular verbs: John goes to work at 8. Sally dines at 1. Students provide more examples from information previously published by their classmates. 5 Do the same for a plural of people Ask who lives in queens and ask them to stand up. Then point yourself and those who stand and say: We live in queens. Ask someone who lives in the Bronx and ask them to stand up. Addressing those who stand and say: You live in the Bronx. Point to your group and say: We live in queens. Ask someone who lives in Manhattan and point to this group and say: They live in Manhattan. 6 Introduce the present simply - Negative Make a statement in the affirmative and then make one in the negative with don't. T: I live in queens. I don't live in the Bronx. Ask students to do the same, presenting first affirmative and then negative. The practice of all persons except the third person is the only one. 7 Introduce present simply - Negative (third person sole) Make a statement about the student and then make one negative form, using does not. T: Alex reads the New York Times. He doesn't read USA today. Ask Ask do the same using information previously disseminated by their classmates. 8 Enter the present simply - Issues Make a statement about yourself. Then ask the student a question to submit a do. T: I'm going to school. John, do you go to school? Walk around the classroom asking students questions and teaching them to answer, Yes, I do or No, I don't know. Do the same for all persons except the third person of the only one. 9 Introduce the present simply - Issues (third person singular) Contrasting habits of students. Make a statement about one thing and then ask about another student: T: John goes to school. Does Sarah go to school? Walk around the classroom to ask questions with does, and teach students to answer Yes, he does No, he doesn't. q Expansion and Practice: Real simple exercises practice of all faces and forms. Ask open questions. There are more verbs. Where do you live? Where does she work? What language do you speak? Now is also a great time to consolidate everything they have learned about the present simply; it's a big sheet that will help them focus on form. Obviously, you don't have to follow all these steps in one lesson: You can spread them throughout the week to make sure that your students have enough time to practice real simple exercises in all its forms.
